When Roy was a boy, he often heard people tell a story about a baby and an eagle. The story is as follows.

One day a young woman was reading a book next to her baby son at the park. He was in a baby buggy.

At that time, a big eagle was circling overhead. The baby waved his legs and arms in the air. The baby's mother heard the sound of the eagle's wings, and looked up from her book. Suddenly the eagle swooped down to the baby buggy. The eagle caught the baby and lifted him up. She threw her book at the eagle, shouting and waving her arms. The eagle tried to take the baby higher, but it was surprised at the woman's shout and dropped him from its claws. Luckily, the baby landed on the soft grass.

His mother ran to pick him up in her arms. He was safe, but on both sides of his body blood was coming from cuts made by the eagle's sharp claws.

The baby boy grew up to be a man, and lived to a good old age. He was very strong, but all his life he had the marks from the cuts on his body.

Dear Masaki

Hi, Masaki. How are you doing? I’m in the international dance school in New York. The students at this school have to do a three-year full-time training program. I have classes in nutrition, drama and music from Monday to Wednesday. I usually have regular school subjects like math, language study and science in the morning, and three hours of dance and body training, for example cycling and swimming, in the afternoon from Monday to Thursday. On Fridays, I take Yoga or weight training in the morning and I am free in the afternoon. Yoga and weight training help dancers to build up muscles. Dancers should be careful of injuries because they work their bodies so hard. I am learning how to make my body stronger. I eat healthy food and have good sleep. I took the beginner weight training class on Fridays last month, but now I’m taking Yoga. I also learn the history of art or the history of dance in a night class on Saturdays. Of course there is homework every day. Rehearsal for the Christmas concert performance will start next month. I have been busy since I entered this school last month, but dancing always makes me happy.

I know you are very interested in dancing. So, please come and visit me with aunt Keiko during summer vacation. I’ll show you my school life.

Take care.

Nicole

第 13 問 次の文章を読み、以下の設問に答えなさい。

We see many different colors in our daily lives. Colors have different meanings to different people. My favorite color is green. I like plants and flowers. I often go to the flower park because the color green makes me relaxed and happy. In many cultures, green means balance, new life, and youth. Blue is the color of peace. It reminds me of a beautiful sky and sea. Red feels strong and warm, but it also has a negative meaning. It means anger. That's because our faces turn red when we get angry. Yellow means happiness and hope. Orange also means happiness. It stimulates the appetite. Many restaurants use this color because it will keep people having a good time, eating, and drinking more. Yellow and black stripes tell us something is dangerous. They are used for traffic and railroad warning signs. Insects use stripes, too. "Don't touch bees! It is dangerous." Color is a very powerful tool for communication. It gives us good hints in our lives.

Cacao beans were used to make chocolate drinks. The beans were cut from the tree and boiled in A to make a drink which could be used as medicine. The very first people who discovered cacao were Mayas. They did not use B then. They put chili peppers into chocolate drinks. So the first chocolate drinks were not C.

According to historians, Christopher Columbus brought some cacao beans to Spain in the 1500s. Over the next century, chocolate drinks soon became popular. Cacao beans were expensive, so chocolate drinks were a status symbol for upper class people.

No one knows the origin of the word “Chocolate”, but some scholars believe that it comes from a Central American language and means a “bitter drink” or “hot drink”.

第 15 問 次の文章を読み、以下の設問に答えなさい。

I was standing outside the front door of my house with a police officer. He said to my mother, “Is this boy your son?”

My mother sighed. I think she wanted to say ‘no.’ She looked at me sadly.

“Yes, that’s my son, John. What has he done this time?”

“We found him outside the Potter’s house on Baker Road. He tried to enter the Potter’s house with this black mask, black gloves, and a hat, shouting something. Mr. Potter heard the voice, saw him and called us.”

“I’m so sorry, Officer. My husband and I will talk to John. I promise you that he won’t get into trouble again.”

The door closed. My mother looked at me. I was suddenly very afraid.

“Mom, it was just a joke! I thought Tom was in the living room, not his father! I didn’t know he would call the police!”

“John, that’s enough! (ア) have the police brought you home this year?”

“Umm... twice?”

“Three times! And each time you said, ‘It was just a joke!’”

I looked down at the floor.

“You need to grow up. You have too much (イ) time. When I was your age, I worked every summer.”

“Yes, but you lived on a farm.”

“Yes, I did. Oh, I have a good idea. I’ll call Uncle George. You can help him on his farm this summer.”

“But, Mom...” I couldn’t talk. Uncle George was about 60 years old. He lived alone in a small village. There was nothing to do at his house. He didn’t have a computer, or a DVD player.

“What about my camping trip this summer?”

“Your plans have changed, John! If Uncle George says OK, we’ll take you to his farm on Saturday.”

“Saturday? Work all summer? This is going to be my (ウ) summer ever!”
